'ROOSTER SUNDAY' IS GAINING FAVOR THROUGH NATION

No "Rooster Sunday" is not a religious festival. It is a purely culinary occasion, but like many church days, it is not fixed in the calendar, and may come on almost any Sunday in the year. In some respects it resembles the old time boarding house chicken Sundays and chicken Wednesdays, which really were rooster days under a more euphonious name.

Rooster Sundays have made great strides toward popularity in the middle west where the idea originated, much to the sorrow of the male birds in thousands of poultry flocks and to the profit of the farmer and poultryman. On these designated days the roosters must sacrifice their lives for the progress of the poultry industry and the people are supposed to eat rooster whether they want to or not. It is one of the ways devised by the poultry field men of the department of agriculture to dispose of surplus males in the infertile egg campaign which they are carrying on.

The Rooster Sunday idea originated in South Dakota, where it was first observed on May 25 last. In one small town in that state more than 100 roosters were sold by the meat market in observance of the day, to say nothing of the large number taken from backyard coops at home.

According to the report from one of the department's poultry field men working in Missouri, the infertile egg campaign has been generally observed in the central west. In Missouri, always given to the superlative, not only Rooster Sunday but Rooster week was observed in the latter part of May, when the slogan "Sell, kill, or confine the male" was adopted. It was necessary to extend the campaign a few days to give sufficient time in which to eliminate the males from all the flocks as far as possible.

A tour of the commission markets in Kansas City five days after the drive started gave abundant evidence that "Rooster week" was making good progress in the "show me" state. Many full crates of male birds no longer needed for breeding purposes were found, showing that a bill of expense to their owners was removed as well as the cause of untold waste through fertile eggs, which spoil quickly when exposed to the high temperatures of the summer months.

"Rooster week" was instigated by the department of agricultural extension poultry men who found ready help from produce dealers and cold storage operators who handle immense quantities of eggs during the summer months and who have usually found it necessary to cut the price of eggs considerably during hot weather. The reduction in price is due largely to the blood rings and developed hatch spots which constitute a large percentage of the spoiled eggs that reach the market during hot weather. These defects are due directly to the fact that fertile eggs spoil quickly when exposed to summer heat.

Not only have egg dealers given their moral support to the campaign, but in some places they have called meetings to discuss ways and means to carry on the work. More than $500 was raised by the dealers to be used in advertising and for prizes to be given for the marketing of better eggs. Fifty thousand copies of a circular containing the Missouri state law, together with valuable suggestions pertaining to handling market eggs were distributed in one section of the state as a part of the publicity campaign. Articles appeared weekly in the country newspapers giving further information and suggestions.

This sort of work is making unequalled progress for the poultry industry in general, say the department poultry specialists. The system with which poultry extension work is being conducted is very largely responsible for this result. More than a third of all American carpets are woven in Philadelphia.

NEWS NOTES FROM MOVIELAND

60 DAISY DEAN

Jeannie McPherson in her aviation togs.

Almost everybody knows Jeannie McPherson's picture plays or adaptations, but even regular movie fans know little else about her. She is becoming famous out in the film colony on the coast because of her daring as pilot of her own aircraft. This dainty authoress has been one of aviation's staunchest boosters. Ever since Cecil B. de Mille, the famous director who has made many of her plays successful, became inoculated with the aviation germ, Miss McPherson has been an enthusiastic aviatrix.

First as a passenger, then as a pupil and now as a pilot she has shown that she can do other things besides write interesting photoplays. Now her favorite pastime is watching from her airplane the companies in the Lasky studios film scenes from her scenarios. She has made such a habit of reviewing her plays in this fashion that the actors and other studio people hardly notice the hum of her motor as she hovers above them while they work.

Miss McPherson was born in Boston, Mass., and educated in Paris. She was on the stage for a short time and then acted and directed for Biograph, Edison, Universal and Lasky. Among the many successful pictures which she has written or adapted are "The Captive," "The Heart of Nora Flynn," "The Golden Chance," "The Dream Girl," "Joan, The Woman," "A Romance of the Redwoods," "The Little American," and "The Woman God Forgot."

What Next?
Jackie Saunders has finished "Some One Must Pay" under direction of Louis Abrahams and is taking a much-needed rest in her New York home before resuming her screen activities. Miss Saunders is hesitating between a trip to France with her husband and an offer to make a special feature for the World Film corporation.

JAPS ENTERING U. S.
Mexico City—Three thousand Japanese have arrived in Lower California with the evidence intention of settling there, say Mexican newspapers which add that it is believed many of these immigrants crossed the international boundary and made secret entrance to the United States.

Alice Joyce.

This month is bringing out more than one interesting photoplay which has mystery and thrills a plenty in it. There was a comedy drama "The Love Burglar," "Secret Service," the Civil war spy play, "The Thirteenth Chair" and now comes Joyce in "The Third Degree."

"The Third Degree" hardly needs more recommendation than that it has Alice Joyce in the leading role. But besides having this popular star in a role that gives her great opportunity to display her skill in emotional acting, the story has a sensational turn every few moments. Especially interesting is the exposure of police methods in attempting to wring a confession out of an innocent man.

The play is adapted from the late Charles Klein's famous play of the same name and in it Alice Joyce assumes the role of Annie Sands, the waitress. She might be said to add new fame to the already famous role. The story starts when Annie meets and later marries a young college boy when one of his friends is found dead. The police use the famous third degree and force him to confess to a crime he had never committed.

By diligence and self sacrifice, however, the young wife proves her husband innocent. Involving her own good name to do it. After many sensational disclosures, however, the play comes to a happy conclusion.

It is only recently that Alice Joyce came back to the screen world and in doing so she brought one of the most popular and skilled actresses to be seen on the silver sheet. She takes advantage of every opportunity afforded her in this latest release, which gives her one of the strongest emotional roles in her screen career.

Studio Shorts.
Art Acord, who was recently forced from Edith Sterling, the married last week to Miss Edna Noreas of Pasadena. Wallace McDonald will play opposite Marguerite Clark in "A Girl Named Mary."
